

This photo is showing people collaborating with each other, this is inspired by the Canvas discussion board. In the dashboard, we are showing how much the student is participating in the discussion board.

This photo is showing two kids having a cart race, this resembles competition and students aiming to achieve H1 in their subjects. In our dashboard, we are displaying whether the student is in the top 10% of the class. We are hoping this can encourage students to work harder and achieve higher marks.

This photo is showing someone relaxing. We want students to feel relaxed when they see that they are on track and having completed every single assignments and quizzes on time.

The photo is showing students attending a lecture. In our dashboard, we are reminding students to watch the lecture capture, so that students will not miss out on any lectures.

These three colour palettes are the main colours for the dashboard. It is the same colour palettes as the canvas colour palettes. The reason why we are using the same colour palettes is because the dashboard is located inside the canvas, and we want the colour of the dashboard to match the Canvas colour.

This photo is showing a student studying. The purpose of this dashboard is to help students learn by allowing them to review and reflect on their learning skills.
